

11-Minute Essay Draft

Wolpert-Gawron, H. Writing Behind Every Door. Routledge, New York: 2014. Print.

adapted from an
OCTELA 2016 “I Hate
Writing” presentation by
Dr. Mary Bell-Nolan

PRACTICING INFORMATIVE/EXPLANATORY WRITING &
EASING WRITING ANXIETY ON STANDARDIZED TESTS

STEP ONE Getting Ready

Display a visual (piece of artwork, picture, graphic, etc.) with a truism/saying that correlates to piece(s) of literature and/or informational text(s) students are reading/have read. Ask students to look at the visual and read the truism. Ask the students to think about the truism and write it down onto their papers as their first sentence in the opening paragraph. Tell them to be sure to indent.

Power
corrupts.

Power Corrupts.

STEP TWO: The First Minute

Have students brainstorm and write for one minute to answer the question “what does this mean?” in response to the artwork and truism. The writer will be interpreting the statement and/or the picture in terms of his/her own knowledge and experiences. He/she will be finishing the introductory paragraph. Be sure to tell them when the minute is almost finished so they can wrap up their final thought/sentence. A sample response to the picture and saying above could be:

Power Corrupts. When people are afforded a sense of entitlement, they begin to treat others as if they are beneath them. They believe they are better than others and therefore, more powerful. They are deserving of better things. This allows them to treat others unfairly. It distorts their sense of self and others. If this goes unchecked, the entitlement will not only destroy those that they deem unworthy, it will make them rotten to the core.

STEP THREE: Three Minutes

Have the students brainstorm and write for three minutes answering the question “how do you know that’s true?” The writer should think of one or more of the texts from class that prove the truism. He/she should write about how the novel/short story/article/other supports the idea stated in the first paragraph. Remind them to indent before they start. Be sure to tell them when the three minutes are almost finished so they can wrap up their final thought/sentence. An example is:

In William Golding’s Lord of the Flies, a boy named Ralph becomes corrupted by power. After he gets a thirst for blood by hunting and killing pigs, he begins to hunt and kill humans. He has followers who do his bidding and do not question his authority, so the question of whether his actions are right or wrong does not enter into his thinking. The boys are alone on an island without adult supervision.

STEP FOUR: Three Minutes

Have the students brainstorm and write for three minutes about a visual text that also proves the idea. Tell them to use the name of the movie/video/speech/play as they write about it. Remind them to indent before they start. Be sure to tell them when the three minutes are almost finished so they can wrap up their final thought/sentence. An example is:

A video parallel would be “Somalia’s Child Soldiers” where young boys are actual war-time soldiers. They carry AK47s and smoke like adults. They kill people like any adult soldier. These boys have experienced a loss of innocence. They have the power that toting a gun gives to them. They have the power to take life away from others. This gives them a corrupted view of childhood and the real world.

STEP FIVE: Three Minutes

Have the students brainstorm and write for three minutes about how the idea has been proven true in their life experiences. Remind them to indent before they start. Be sure to tell them when the three minutes are almost finished so they can wrap up their final thought/sentence. An example is:

In my life, this truism was illustrated when my coach made us run until we threw-up. We had to listen to him because we wanted to be on the football team. He used his authority to make us do his bidding. He should have seen that he was pushing us too hard in the hot sun.

STEP SIX: The Final Minute

Have the students brainstorm and write for one minute about one question that remains. They could tie the truism to the bigger world, look at it again with fresh eye, take another stance, etc. They could answer the question “so what?” in response to their essay, thus far. This will be the concluding paragraph. Remind them to indent before they start. Be sure to tell them when the minute is almost finished so they can wrap up their final thought/sentence. An example is:

On the other hand, power could be confused with control. Maybe it is not power that corrupts. Maybe people become corrupted when they have control over others. This would be true for all three of the examples used in this essay. Ralph has control over the island, the boy soldiers have control over anyone they target with the guns, and the coach controlled our fate concerning making the team.

HOW TO USE THE DRAFT

- Can be developed into a formal essay
- Can be used to teach correct formatting for in-text citations
- Process can be repeated as practice for standardized tests
- Can be used to evaluate strength of paragraphs, supports, reasoning, etc.
- Can be used with mini/lesson (workshop model) to teach mastery of any/all of the following 9-12 standards:
  - Introduce a topic; organize complex ideas, concepts, and information to make important connections and distinctions
  - Introduce a topic; organize complex ideas, concepts, and information so that each new element builds on that which precedes it to create a unified whole
  - Develop the topic with well-chosen, relevant, and sufficient facts, extended definitions, concrete details, quotations, or other information and examples appropriate to the audience's knowledge of the topic
  - Develop the topic thoroughly by selecting the most significant and relevant facts, extended definitions, concrete details, quotations, or other information and examples appropriate to the audience's knowledge of the topic
  - Use appropriate and varied transitions to link the major sections of the text, create cohesion, and clarify the relationships among complex ideas and concepts
  - Use appropriate and varied transitions and syntax to link the major sections of the text, create cohesion, and clarify the relationships among complex ideas and concepts
  - Use precise language and domain-specific vocabulary to manage the complexity of the topic
  - Use precise language, domain-specific vocabulary, and techniques such as metaphor, simile, and analogy to manage the complexity of the topic
  - Establish and maintain a formal style and objective tone while attending to the norms and conventions of the discipline in which they are writing
  - Provide a concluding statement or section that follows from and supports the information or explanation presented
  - Produce clear and coherent writing in which the development, organization, and style are appropriate to task, purpose, and audience
  - Develop and strengthen writing as needed by planning, revising, editing, rewriting, or trying a new approach, focusing on addressing what is most significant for a specific purpose and audience
  - Draw evidence from literary or informational texts to support analysis and reflection
  - Integrate information into the text selectively to maintain the flow of ideas, avoiding plagiarism and over reliance on any one source and following a standard format for citation
  - Cite strong and thorough textual evidence to support analysis of what the text says explicitly as well as inferences drawn from the text
  - Analyze in detail how an author's ideas or claims are developed and refined by particular sentences and paragraphs
  - Integrate multiple sources of information presented in different media or formats (e.g., visually, quantitatively) as well as in words in order to address a question