Teachable

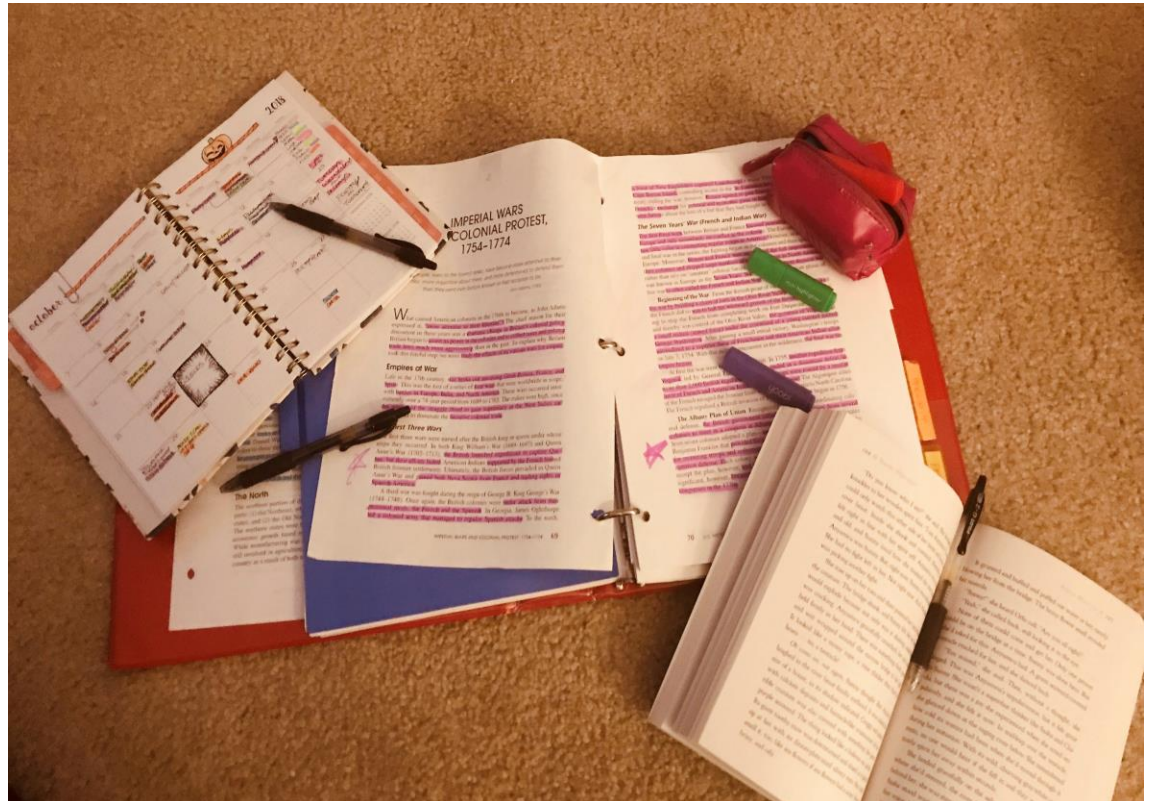

“The curriculum tells you ‘what’, not ‘how’. The ‘how’ is the artistry in education.”

GEORGE COUROS

Be Excellent

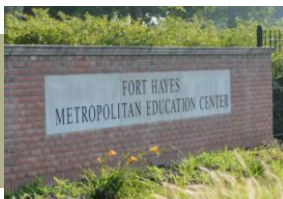

The mission of Fort Hayes is to create expectations of excellence through challenging and collaborative learning by blending the arts, academic and career programs.

1. A Spirit of Humility

You cannot tell a “know-it-all” anything he thinks he already knows. Or as Erwin G. Hall puts it, “We can’t learn anything new until we can admit that we don’t already know everything.” Teachable people approach life with an understanding that they can learn from anybody regardless of that person’s state, status, or station in life. Such a spirit involves humility, and such humility keeps the door open for knowledge and truth to find a lodging place in our hearts.

2. A Hunger for Wisdom on a Daily Basis

It is often said, “Knowledge is proud because it knows so much, wisdom is humbled because it knows so little.” People who are teachable have a great desire to learn on a daily basis. Abraham Lincoln, arguably one of the wisest presidents in our nation’s history, said, “I do not think much of a man who is not wiser today than he was yesterday.”

3. Opened Eyes and Unclogged Ears

I try to learn something new every day that can help me become a better person. Not only do I read constantly, but I try to find truisms in common, run-of-the-mill, ordinary situations. Wisdom and truth abound, but we must pursue them. If you are intentionally looking for ways to grow, you will be supplied the venues for finding truth.

4. A Closed Mouth

An open mind and a closed mouth provide an atmosphere conducive for learning. Doug Larson said, "Wisdom is the reward you get for a lifetime of listening when you would have preferred to talk". Leaders have to speak; it is part of the job. But a leader who rarely listens is hardly learning enough to continue leading. I love what Hans Finzel said, "If you can't be silent, you will have nothing to say."

5. A Positive Outlook

Learners are able to find opportunities in every situation; even, or should I say, especially, adverse ones. Those with a teachable spirit see adversity as an opportunity to do something better. I certainly do not welcome hardships and trials into my life, but I have come to realize something about diversity: when it shows up, my attitude needs to be one that will reflect upon it as a challenge as well as a learning opportunity.

6. A Desire to be Around Growing People

Learners genuinely want to learn; therefore, most learners I know want to be around people who can teach them. Some of the greatest moments in my life have been in coffee shops with people who have invested in my personal growth. Surround yourself with people of wisdom, experience and insight. Then allow some of it to rub off on you.

7. A Willingness to Apply what they Learn

Teachable people not only pursue truth, they find ways to implement truth in their lives. John Maxwell said, "The true value of teach-ability comes when we take something that we learn and apply it." We should strive to be "doers". The only way to be a "doer" is to be a learner, and the only way to be a learner is to have a teachable spirit.

If you are not willing to learn,
No one can help you.
If you are determined to learn,
No one can stop you.

Department thoughts on being

Teachable

"Traditionally, we have focused on teaching as a skill and forgotten what Socrates knew: Teaching is a gift, learning is a skill."

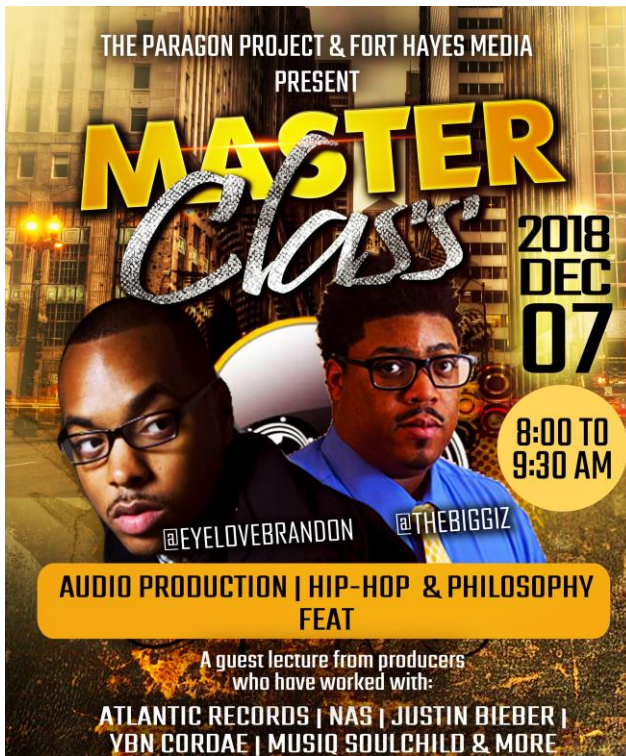

Social Studies

Please see "How you can tell if you are teachable or not" on page 3

English

"To stop learning is to stop growing.
Always remain teachable."

How Can You Tell if You Are Teachable or Not

by Mihai Herman

It's pretty easy to tell if you (or someone) is open to learning new information. You are teachable if you:

- Are aware of your strengths and weaknesses
- Seek help
- Accept that other's opinion might be better than yours
- Take notes
- Learn from criticism
- Take responsibility for your failures and seek lessons to learn
- Read books and seek answers
- Focus on solutions
- Live a conscious life and learn from all kinds of situations
- Are so aware that you learn from other people's mistakes
- Love to get out of your comfort zone
- Love to try something new
- Admit when you're wrong
- Are open to doing things in a totally different way
- Are confident in changing your routine
- Have a mentor or you are looking for one
- Ask questions and have a curious attitude
- Are aware that you don't know everything and you are open to learning
